Zero Hours Employment Contract

Hospitality and event staff

This agreement records the principal terms of employment between Vergo Ltd and the employee. It is designed for genuinely irregular assignments: VERGO does not guarantee work, and the employee is not required to accept work offered. Once an assignment is accepted, the employee must attend and perform it in accordance with this agreement and the assignment details.

1 Employment status and duration

You are employed by Vergo Ltd under a permanent zero-hours employment arrangement. Your employment begins on the date shown above and continues until ended in accordance with this agreement. No collective agreement applies.

This agreement does not guarantee any minimum number of assignments or hours. Periods when no work is offered or performed do not by themselves end this agreement. Statutory rights and continuity of employment will apply in accordance with the law.

2 Roles and duties

Your general job title is Hospitality and Event Staff. Depending on your skills, experience and each accepted assignment, duties may include waiting, bar work, food running, kitchen porter work, catering assistance, cloakroom or guest support, event setup and breakdown, cleaning, supervisory support, or other reasonable hospitality and event duties explained before the assignment.

You must follow reasonable instructions from VERGO and, while on assignment, reasonable site and operational instructions from the client or venue. Nothing in a client instruction changes VERGO's position as your employer. You must perform duties with reasonable care, professionalism and regard for guests, colleagues, food safety, licensing rules and venue standards.

3 Assignments and hours

VERGO may offer assignments by email, text message, telephone, scheduling system or another agreed method. Each offer should identify, so far as known, the date, location, expected start and finish time, role, rate of basic pay, dress code and any special requirements.

You may accept or decline an offered assignment without penalty. VERGO is not obliged to offer work, and you are not obliged to make yourself available. You may work for other organisations, including competitors, provided this does not create a conflict of interest, misuse confidential information or prevent you from attending an assignment you have accepted.

Once you accept an assignment, it becomes a work commitment. You must attend punctually and remain for the agreed hours, subject to lawful rest breaks and reasonable operational changes. If you cannot attend or expect to be late, you must notify VERGO immediately. Repeated late cancellation, non-attendance or lateness may be addressed under the disciplinary procedure.

Hours vary and may include early mornings, evenings, nights, weekends and public holidays. You are responsible for submitting accurate timesheets or confirming recorded hours by the stated payroll deadline. Hours may be verified with the client.

4 Place of work and travel

There is no single normal workplace. Assignments will usually take place at client and event venues in London and may occasionally be elsewhere in the United Kingdom by agreement. You will be told the location before accepting an assignment.

Unless VERGO agrees otherwise in writing for a particular assignment, you are responsible for ordinary travel to and from the assignment location. Authorised business expenses will be reimbursed against receipts in accordance with VERGO's expenses instructions. You will not be required to work outside the United Kingdom for more than one month unless separate written terms are provided.

5 Pay

The basic hourly rate may differ between assignments and roles. VERGO will confirm the applicable basic hourly rate before you accept each assignment. It will always be at least the applicable National Minimum Wage or National Living Wage. There is no guaranteed salary or minimum monthly payment.

Wages for authorised hours worked in each monthly pay period will normally be paid by bank transfer on the last working day of that month, subject to the payroll cut-off notified by VERGO. Hours received after the cut-off may be paid in the next payroll run. You will receive an itemised payslip showing gross pay, holiday pay, deductions and net pay.

No enhanced rate for overtime, nights, Sundays or public holidays applies unless VERGO confirms an enhanced rate for the assignment in writing.

6 Requests for early payment

VERGO operates a monthly pay schedule. If you need access before the normal payday to wages already earned, you may request an earlier payment. VERGO will consider the request and will try to assist where reasonably practicable, but approval is discretionary and cannot be guaranteed.

Any approved early payment will be processed through payroll as an advance or early payment of earned wages and will be shown on, or reconciled in, the relevant payslip. VERGO will not normally advance pay for future or unworked shifts.

7 Holiday and rolled up holiday pay

The holiday year runs from 1 April to 31 March. Because your hours under this agreement are wholly or mostly variable, VERGO intends to treat you as an irregular-hours worker for statutory holiday purposes while that remains factually and legally correct.

For each pay period, VERGO will pay rolled-up holiday pay calculated at 12.07% of your total pay for work done in that pay period, or any different statutory rate or method required by law. Holiday pay is additional to the confirmed basic assignment rate and will be identified as a separate payment on your payslip. It is not included invisibly within the basic hourly rate.

You remain entitled and are expected to take statutory annual leave. Because no hours are guaranteed, leave normally means notifying VERGO that you are unavailable and declining assignments during the leave period. Unless agreed otherwise, request planned leave as early as possible and at least twice the length of the proposed leave. VERGO may refuse or require different dates where permitted by law and operationally necessary.

Bank and public holidays do not create an additional paid entitlement and may be working days. Holiday entitlement and pay on termination will be calculated in accordance with the law. If your work pattern ceases to qualify for rolled-up holiday pay, VERGO may change the holiday-pay method after giving written notice and complying with the law.

8 Rest breaks and working time

You are entitled to rest breaks and daily and weekly rest in accordance with the Working Time Regulations. Break arrangements may vary by assignment and will be explained by VERGO or the venue. Tell VERGO promptly if you believe required rest is not being provided.

Unless you have signed a lawful opt-out, VERGO will not require you to work more than an average of 48 hours a week over the applicable reference period. You must tell VERGO about working time for other employers where necessary for VERGO to meet its legal duties.

9 Probation

The first three months are a probationary period. VERGO may extend probation reasonably where more time is needed to assess attendance, conduct, capability or where too few assignments have been worked. During probation, performance, reliability, right-to-work compliance and suitability for rostered roles will be reviewed.

Successful completion of probation does not create guaranteed hours. VERGO may use a shortened capability or disciplinary process during probation, subject always to statutory rights.

10 Sickness and absence

If you cannot attend an accepted assignment because of sickness or another emergency, you must contact VERGO as soon as possible and, except where impossible, before the assignment starts. You must provide the reason and likely duration and follow any certification requirements.

There is no contractual sick pay. Statutory Sick Pay will be paid where you meet the legal eligibility conditions. Other statutory leave and pay, including family-related leave, will apply where you qualify.

11 Pension and benefits

VERGO will assess you for workplace pension automatic enrolment and will provide pension information separately. If eligible, contributions will be deducted and paid in accordance with the applicable scheme and law. No non-statutory benefits are provided unless confirmed separately in writing.

12 Training, qualifications and right to work

You must maintain the legal right to work in the United Kingdom and immediately notify VERGO of any change, restriction or expiry affecting that right. Where your permission limits hours or types of work, you must provide accurate term dates and other requested evidence and must not accept work that would breach the restriction.

Any mandatory induction or training required by VERGO will be identified separately, including whether it is paid and whether VERGO bears the cost. You must keep any role-specific licences, food-safety certifications or other qualifications stated as essential for an assignment valid and provide evidence on request. There is no general entitlement to employer-funded training.

13 Standards, uniform and property

You must comply with assignment briefs, dress and grooming standards, health and safety rules, food hygiene requirements, alcohol licensing requirements, equality and anti-harassment standards, data-protection instructions and reasonable venue policies. You must not attend work impaired by alcohol or illegal drugs.

Any uniform, equipment, keys, passes, records or other property belonging to VERGO, a client or venue must be used carefully and returned promptly on request or when employment ends. You must report accidents, hazards, complaints, safeguarding concerns, losses and damage immediately.

14 Confidentiality and data protection

During and after employment, you must not misuse or disclose confidential information about VERGO, its clients, venues, guests, staff, pricing, bookings, security arrangements or business operations, except as required for your work or by law. This does not prevent protected disclosures, reporting wrongdoing, cooperating with regulators or exercising legal rights.

VERGO will process personal data for employment, payroll, rostering, right-to-work, client assurance, safety and legal compliance purposes in accordance with applicable data-protection law and any privacy notice issued to you. You must handle personal data encountered at work only as instructed.

15 Deductions

VERGO may make deductions required by law, including PAYE income tax, National Insurance, pension contributions and court orders. You authorise VERGO, to the extent permitted by law, to deduct genuine overpayments, duplicate payments, outstanding advances, excess holiday pay where applicable, and the reasonable replacement cost of unreturned property or loss caused by your deliberate act or serious negligence.

VERGO will explain non-routine deductions. No deduction will reduce pay below the legal minimum where that would be unlawful. Any remaining lawful sum may be recovered separately if it cannot be deducted from final pay.

16 Cancellation or changes to assignments

Event requirements can change. VERGO will give as much notice as reasonably practicable if an assignment is changed or cancelled. Any statutory right to notice, payment for a cancelled or curtailed shift, or guaranteed hours will apply automatically when and to the extent it is in force and applies to you.

Unless legislation, a written assignment term or another binding agreement requires payment, there is no contractual payment for hours not worked following cancellation before an assignment starts. If you have started work or are required to remain available at the venue, pay will be determined by the hours treated as working time and any applicable law or written assignment terms.

17 Disciplinary and grievance procedures

VERGO's disciplinary and grievance procedures are available from the Company Director and do not form part of this contract unless stated otherwise. If you wish to raise a grievance, submit it in writing to the Company Director. If a disciplinary decision or dismissal decision is made, you may appeal in writing to the person identified in the outcome letter, normally within five working days.

VERGO may suspend you from assignments on full pay where appropriate while investigating a serious matter. Because hours are not guaranteed, any suspension pay will be assessed by reference to accepted assignments and applicable law.

18 Ending employment

During probation, either party may end employment by giving one week's written notice. After probation, you must give one week's written notice. VERGO will give one week's written notice or the statutory minimum notice, whichever is greater.

VERGO may dismiss without notice for gross misconduct or another lawful ground permitting summary dismissal. VERGO may make a payment in lieu of notice or require you not to perform accepted assignments during notice. On termination, you must return property and submit outstanding timesheets and expenses promptly. Earned wages and any other sums due will be paid through payroll, subject to lawful deductions.

19 Changes to terms

VERGO may make reasonable non-material administrative or policy changes and changes required by law. Any material contractual change will be discussed with you and confirmed in writing. A delay in enforcing a term does not waive it. If any provision is unenforceable, the remaining provisions continue.

20 Governing law

This agreement is governed by the law of England and Wales. The courts and employment tribunals of England and Wales will have jurisdiction, subject to any mandatory legal rules. Statutory employment rights prevail over any inconsistent wording in this agreement.

Agreement and signatures

By signing, both parties confirm that they have read and understood this agreement and that it records the principal terms of employment. The employee confirms that information supplied about identity, right to work, qualifications and restrictions is accurate.
